

Wilkes Artis Launches Initiative to Assist Maryland Homeowners

As Wilkes Artis continues to coordinate with various policy makers and tax officials addressing the economic impact of COVID-19, we also want to provide resources for families and individuals impacted by this crisis in the state of Maryland.

To that end, we will be representing Maryland homeowners pro bono who now find themselves unemployed. In these uncertain times, we believe it is imperative that a homeowner's tax liability does not cause stress, financial strain or lead to homelessness.

The COVID-19 pandemic has severely impaired the economy. News organizations are reporting that unemployment may rise to levels not seen since the Great Depression. While many financial institutions are working with homeowners to alleviate the strain of making mortgage payments, homeowners still face the burden of property taxes based on exceedingly high values.

Should you know of someone who needs our help, please do not hesitate to contact us. We will be committing our skilled and experienced team to offer this service at no charge to those most in need at this time. Please call or email Nancie Allen at 202-457-7836 or NAllen@wilkesartis.com.

We extend our sincerest appreciation to the women and men who are fighting the COVID-19 battle for the health of our families and communities, and we are committed to lending assistance where we can.

We hope you stay healthy and safe and look forward to seeing you soon.
